

Published based on Beware of Back to School Germs

Beware of Back to School Germs

There are tons of germs that live in schools. But there are certain places that germs thrive. Click on the link to find out where tons of germs are lurking at your child's school, so your kids can do their best to try to avoid them or wash their hands after coming in contact with them.

Are your kids ready for school? Don't forget to pack the antibacterial wipes. "Kids and germs are practically synonymous," says Dr. Aaron Glatt, spokesperson for the Infectious Diseases Society of America. "Fortunately, kids are also pretty resilient. Those with healthy immune systems don't usually have much to worry about as long as they use common sense." However, it never hurts to take precautionary measures to safeguard children from communicable germs and diseases. The first step is to know where bacteria is lurking in the classroom, and it's not always where you think.

Beware of Back to School Germs - AOL Health

You can also find this article published on Beware of Back to School Germs, and on the tag pages AOL, AOL health, Germs, schools.