

Published based on Almost 69,000 Pounds of Cheese Recalled Over Possible Contamination

Almost 69,000 Pounds of Cheese Recalled Over Possible Contamination

First it was the eggs, then it was the meat, and now it is the cheese. Morningland Dairy has recalled about 60,000 pounds of cheese. The cheese may have been contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes and maybe even Staphylococcus aureus. Click on one of the links to find out what type of cheeses were recalled and what Listeria monocytogenes and Staphylococcus aureus are.

Morningland Dairy of Mountain View, Mo. is recalling 68,957 pounds of cheese because it may be contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes and/or Staphylococcus aureus, according to a news release from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Almost 69,000 Pounds of Cheese Recalled Over Possible Contamination - AOL Health

You can also find this article published on Almost 69,000 Pounds of Cheese Recalled Over Possible Contamination, and on the tag pages AOL, AOL health, cheese recall, listeria monocytogenes, recall, Staphylococcus aureus.